Another Kings County Grand Juror Makes a Complaint.

The April Body Wanted to Make an Investigation.

by the Presence of the District Attorney's Representative,

Still another Grand Jury of Kings County has been heard from to the effect that it also attempted to investiors and charges of jobbery et public officials of Brooklyn, but was prevented from going on with it by District-Attorney James W. Ridgway. The December Grand Jury, hampered a it had been, did succeed in bringing n several indictments, but was unable mplete its task. The March Grand Jury tried to take up the work where the other had left closed for several days, although Genof, but was prevented by the Districtcalled in Judge Moore to Attorney, who called in Judge Moore to sustain him.

The June Grand Jury did investigate and found that the charges against and found that the charges against may be a sustained. Not being permitted to bring in indictments, the jury did what it considered the next best thing, and brought in a presentment, censuring the alleged guilty officials and regretting the failure to bring in indictments.

Now it is the Grand Jury for the month of April which claims to have been interfered with.

The members of that body also wanted to do a little investigating on their town account, but for reasons that are obvious did not want the District-Attorney nor any of his representatives present. They asked the latter to freave the room—in fact almost demanded that they should do so—but it availed nothing. They insisted that they were the legal advisers of the Grand Jury, and as such had a right to be present.

When this statement was challenged Judge Moore was sent for, with the result that the District-Attorney was triumphant and the investigation was stopped.

Ex-Alderman Richard B. Leech was foreman of the April Grand Jury. He is in the coal business on Atlantic avenue, and was found in his office there by an "Evening World" reporter this morning.

"The anticle of the deal of the deal of the present of the firm, was asked about the closing of the mills, we closed the doors in order to place some new machinery in position. I find the coal business on Atlantic avenue, and was found in his office there by an "Evening World" reporter this morning.

esting."
"By what system the rights and duties of Grand Juries in Brooklyn are different from the rest of the State." continued Mr. Leech, "I don't know. There seems, however, to be a big difference in the law somewhere, otherwise Judge Moore would scarcely sustain the District-Attorney.

In the law somewhere, otherwise Judge Moore would scarcely sustain the District-Attorney.

"The Constitutional Convention ought to be asked to look into the question. As matters stand now, Grand Jurors are mere puppets, locked up in a room to do only as the District-Attorney directs. When there is a big subject for investigation, the Grand Jury ought to be allowed to go ahead with it, without the dictation of the District-Attorney or any one else."

Lawyer William J. Gaynor did not reach his office to-day, and all kinds of stories were set on foot to the effect that he was preparing another bombahell to fire into the camp of the politicians.

shell to fire into the camp of the politicians.

Twice, at least, he has had staterooms engaged on one of the ocean steamships, intending to spend a couple of months in Europe. He remained, however, in order to see what move Mayor Boody would take. Now that the evidence presented to the Grand Jury has been published, and the war is on, he may give up thoughts of vacation altogether.

The fact that he proposes bringing suit against the Mayor and Aidermen to have the alleged fraudulent franchises set aside created considerable surprise on facturday, when the fact became known it opens up the whole story, and in the event of the suit being successful, the question is already being asked. What will the Mayor do then. The papers in the suit have not yet been served, nor will they be until Mr. Gaynor is ready.

It was given on Saturday that Mayor Boody would go before Judge Moore this morning, and through his counsel make a notion to the effect that all the evidence taken before the Grand Jury concersing himself be expunged from the minutes, and that the presentment be takes from the file.

For that reason, the Court of Sersions was crowded all the morning, but no such application was made. Judge then went home.

When the Mayor was seen in his office he regretted that he had no information to give to the press to day. Everything is now in the hands of the counsel, Gen. Tracy, he said, and it rimains with the latter whether an attempt will be made to punish Mr. Gaynor or perjury, as well as whether other suits will be brought.
